You choose

Ben has just come home late and his father is asking him where he has been. Use the words nothing, nowhere, nobody or no one to fill in the blanks.

Father: Where have you been?

Ben: Nowhere.

Father: You must have been somewhere. Were you at a party?

Ben: I went to Jake's house, but no one/nobody was there.

Father: You never told me about this. What were you doing at Jake's house?

Ben: Nothing.

Father: Really?

Ben: We were playing video games because there was nothing else to do.

Father: Were his parents home?

Ben: No, there was no one/nobody else there.

Father: Well have you had dinner?

Ben: No.

Father: What do you want to eat?

Ben: Nothing. I'm not hungry.

Try these

Use some-, any-, no- or every- plus -body, -where or -thing to fill in the blanks.

1. Keep looking for your keys. They must be in this room somewhere.
2. Is everybody here? Good, let's start the meeting.
3. Dad, there's somebody on the phone for you.
4. When I first moved into town I didn't know anybody.
5. We can only take one bag on our trip, so let's put everything in this big one.
6. If anybody wants to take time off this weekend, let me know.
7. Let's buy something to eat at the movies.
8. I was sick last weekend so I couldn't go anywhere.
9. When I went to Tokyo there were crowds of people everywhere.
10. Nobody in France spoke English. I couldn't understand anybody.

Your turn Answers will vary.

Are you going somewhere this weekend?

I expect I will go somewhere, but I haven't chosen anywhere in particular just yet.

Do you know someone who can eat anything?

No, I don't know anybody who can eat like that.

If you could buy anything, what would you buy? Why?

I would buy an expensive red sports car, because I have always wanted a car like that.
